

For Immediate Release

Pacific Sky Aviation expands training division.

Pacific Sky Aviation announced today that effective immediately it is launching a premium class of Private and Commercial Pilot courses. The two course offerings will focus on Pacific Sky's unique ability to use its full time Professional Corporate Pilots in a training capacity, providing personalized and flexible service to clients from instructors who are actively flying as Commercial and Corporate Pilots.

According to Michael Coughlin, CEO of Pacific Sky, the decision to expand the current offering was a natural one. "Pacific Sky is offering a unique training experience to our clients. Our instructors will not only provide the highest level of personalized flight training, but will be able to mentor clients who are interested in flying in a corporate or commercial flight environment. The premium level of training which we will be providing at Pacific Sky is different from the usual flight schools that have part-time instructors who are not actively flying as Commercial or Corporate Pilots. Our focus will be on the clients, providing them with the highest standard of flight training in the industry."

Enrolment has already begun and is open to clients looking for the highest level of flight training or who wish to complete their training in as little as 12 weeks for the initial Professional Private License. People who are interested in applying should contact Pacific Sky at 250-656-4312 or by sending an email to info@pacificksky.ca.
